CAT PARTY

You're invited! It's a party for cool cats and kittens! Bring some string and maybe a fish to share! Uh oh, someone caughed up a hairball! "Party Foul!" Will you RSVP? Check "Meww or Hiss"
Location: The sunny spot on the couch.
When: As soon as I wake up from my second nap.

I think most people, especially cat lovers, would love to go to a cat party. You can imagein cute cats all around purring and being cute. This is how I imagine cat cafes (we actually got one in Lacey recently). In reality cats are not generally the most social creatures. The havce territorial tendencies and often are a bit standofish with other felines. Also you would imagine that any good cat party would have catnip, which although they love it, seems to instigate little kitty altercations!

The nice thing about a cat party is that cats are really good at knowing when they are done socializing. The party would never get awkward, the cats would just bite you and then run off to hide in the sock drawer.

This week we randmoly drew the prompt Cat Party and allthe Night Drawers attending drew a page or two for this zine! It's a good prompt because it is likely to be very cute. Lots of people draw cats for the Night Drawer even when the prompt is something else entirely. This zine is perfect for them. And it'sperfect for you if you like cats! As usual younever know what to excpect in the pages of the Night Drawer.

We draw every Sunday at 7pm at Le Voyeur, 404 4th Ave in downtown Olympia. You may be too late to attend the cat party, but you can come draw with us any sunday! But now it's time to turn the page and let the party commence!!!

Some Days the Dragon Wins

My crush is having a party and I'm not invited.
It feels bad to not be included...
But maybe they don't think about me that way.
I could just fly by and check it out.
Wait! Do they have Churu?
Damn, I love Churu.
